Newsletter Edition #017

FAMILY AFFAIR: “I like having so many choices,” remarked one of our recent clients. She was speaking of the many digital design options that we present for consideration to choose or to mix and match features.

Shown here are two computerized images “drawn” for owners who wished to have a comfortable gathering place for their multi-generational family. The perspective is from the front deck outside the dining room and runs all the way to the glass doors which open up to a backyard swimming pool.

We proposed taking out walls to create a grand open space which could handle greater foot traffic coming into and going through the house. Can you visualize grandparents, parents and grandkids cooking and eating here, and coming in from a swim?

Ultimately the client wanted to personalize it even further, asking for a couch and TV in this space. Check out our final design on page two, ready for construction.

These clients love color. Barely visible is a black and yellow O’Keefe and Merritt range.

Built in bookshelves and display shelves were welcomed by this family of avid readers.

In this re-configured space readers can now nestle in between their beloved books while staying close to the family. In addition, TV viewing becomes possible for those in the kitchen and at the dining table.

HONOR the BUILDER(S):

It goes without saying that we are proud of the portfolio projects on our website for their visual appeal and their functionality. However, we also revere the “builders” of these homes. Sounds like we are patting ourselves on the back, but wait. Just who are the “builders”?

At Archisys our design-build process includes our designers and general contractor, our structural engineers and specialized subcontractors, as well as our suppliers and the homeowners. Yes, the homeowners! Each finished project reflects the personal taste, needs and budget of our clients, whom we constantly consult. Always a collaborative effort.
